

San Diego Promise Neighborhood

San Diego, California

The San Diego Promise Neighborhood serves children and families in the San Ysidro and Barrio Logan/Logan Heights neighborhoods of San Diego, California. The South Bay Community Services Promise Neighborhoods initiative began in the Castle Park neighborhood of Chula Vista in 2012, and the lead agency recently received a federal five-year grant to expand to a new neighborhood in San Diego. The San Diego Promise Neighborhood includes eight schools and over 20 partner agencies that provide evidence-based services to prepare children for every stage of their education.

NEIGHBORHOOD SNAPSHOT:

San Diego Promise Neighborhood (SDPromise) works in the most impoverished areas in the City of San Diego. The three neighborhoods where SDPromise operates support similar populations that are greatly affected by immigration, transience, poverty, crime, low educational expectancy, and homelessness as well as political, economic, and cultural isolation. Based on this, SDPromise has developed a framework and implementation plan for a seamless continuum of cradle-to-career solutions that will provide all children with opportunities for success; steady, nurturing relationships throughout the pipeline; maximum social integration and participation for all community members; and a clear and viable pathway to college and career success.
