

South Hayward Promise Neighborhood

Alameda County, CA

The Hayward Promise Neighborhoods serve children and families in the San Francisco Bay area in Alameda County. The Hayward Promise Neighborhoods began in the Jackson Triangle neighborhood of Hayward in 2011 and recently received a federal five-year grant to expand to a new neighborhood. This new South Hayward Promise Neighborhood and the other older Promise Neighborhood are both coordinated by California State University East Bay; it includes five schools and over 10 partner agencies that provide evidence-based services to prepare children for every stage of their education.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Flora came to the original Hayward Promise Neighborhood after it began in 2011 to help ensure her family's academic and economic success. Today, she brings her radiant smile, poise, and presence to her role as a member of the Hayward Promise Neighborhoods Community Advisory Board. Flora has provided counsel and leadership to numerous families on how to find their own voices and equitable opportunities for access to high-quality early care and learning, K-12 education, and careers that pay a living wage. She also has had a major influence on the overall direction of the Hayward Promise Neighborhoods.
